FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
ACTION ALERT

OBAMA AND CONGRESS
Fail at Cybersecurity 2001-16

Oct 21, 2016 – Statement of EDWARD C NOONAN, 2016 Presidential Candidate:

Newsmax.com today reported on the massive cyber attacks that occurred on the east coast. They say:

“Cyber attacks targeting a little known internet infrastructure company, Dyn, disrupted access to dozens of websites on Friday, preventing some users from accessing PayPal, Twitter and Spotify.

Dyn, whose customers include some of the world’s most widely visited websites, said it did not know who was responsible for the outages that began in the Eastern United States, and then spread to other parts of the country and overseas.

The outages were intermittent, making it difficult to identify all the victims. But technology news site Gizmodo named some five dozen sites that were affected by the attack. They included CNN, HBO Now, Mashable, the New York Times, People.com, the Wall Street Journal and Yelp.”

Mr. Soetoro (aka BHO) squandered nearly 8 years in doing very little with National Cybersecurity. As usual, he was ALL TALK, NO ACTION! This is AFTER President Bush urged national cybersecurity strategy initiatives which Democrats slapped down 2001-09. Soetoro could not convince a do-nothing Congress to pass cybersecurity.
